Department Research Policy and Ethics

One of the aims of the department is to encourage all its academic staff members to engage in research activities spanning participation in departmental seminars and conferences. They are in particular encouraged to apply for funding and research grants from various sources and funding bodies to conduct independent research. On this note, the department ensures that all its academic staff must observe international research guidelines notably authenticity and ethical research practices. Ultimately, they should endeavor to produce quality and competing research papers that treat current issues pertinent to their expertise or domain of research. In turn, these should be published in peer - reviewed international journals. Particular attention should be given to the nature and scope of research topics. Limitations are enforced to observe culture and religion sensitivities, so topics in breach of the country's values are discarded. Besides research activities, the department sets out various regulations that promotes academic integrity and ethics among students registered in the program. Students are informed that academic dishonesty is severely punished. Students that attempt to gain unfair academic advantage over other students by plagiarizing or cheating in exams will be subject to disciplinary action that ranges from suspension to expulsion from the college.
